New Contemporary Micro-Collection by Art for Everyday Inc.™
Architectural Woodcarving Manufacturer to Display Initial Concept Pieces in New York

Toronto, CANADA: Art For Everyday Inc.™ (AFE) is offering a sneak preview of its new contemporary micro-collection, characterized by clean lines and minimalist detailing this week at the Architectural Digest Home Design Show. Select pieces of the collection will be on display in Booth 952 at Pier 94 in New York City from March 26th to 29th, 2009.

Every kitchen deserves fine details and distinctive styling – even the most modern. The design team at AFE is rising to that challenge with this new collection for modern applications. “I’m bringing the initial products in this collection to Trade Day at the Arch Digest Show to gauge the response and take comments back to the designers as they are working on the final touches,” states Vince Curci, AFE’s Sales and Marketing Manager. “We are launching the collection of posts, corner posts and corbels in its entirety at the Kitchen & Bath Industry Show in Atlanta in May,” adds Curci.

AFE is adding to its existing product lines of over 750 architectural woodcarvings made from the finest North American hardwoods and manufactured at their Toronto, Canada production facilities. Known for custom carving capabilities and the ability to work with designers in custom applications, AFE can also produce custom sizes of standard items, including the new collection, to suit any project.

Visit Booth 952 during the show to preview the new products and pieces from the award-winning Modern Classic Collection. AFE’s complete product selections can be viewed online by visiting
